

CHAPTER I.

BRIEF DESCRIPTION OF THE COUNTRY

1 Marwar, the most extensive State in Rajputana territory, is bounded on the north by Bikaner and Shikharwati district of Boundaries & area. Jey pore, on the east by Jey pore and Kishengarh, on the south-east by Ajmer and Merwara, on the south by Sirohi and Palanpur, on the west by the Rann of Kachh and the Thar and Parkar districts of Sindhl, on the north-west by Jey sulmire. It lies generally between 24° 30' and 27 10' north latitude and 70° 0' to 75 20' east longitude. Its maximum length north-east and south-west is about 290 miles, and its maximum breadth 130 miles. The extent of its superficial area, which has not yet been completely surveyed, may be put in round numbers as 37,000 square miles.

2 The configuration of the country may be briefly described as a vast Configuration sandy plain with various isolated hills in the S E third of the district, or to the S of the Luni river, but none of these hills are sufficiently elevated or extensive to deserve the name of the mountain ranges.

3 The geological characteristics of the country are somewhat complex Geology & soils. and vary considerably as the district is traversed from east to west. The metamorphic or transition rocks, found in that part of the Arvallis bounding Marwar are chiefly gneiss, hornblende, quartz and mica slate, but in the higher hills, bands of L-salt and porphyry are seen and occasionally granite, which more towards the south, becomes the principal feature of the high part of the range as at Abu. The fort commanding the city is built on a sandstone formation rising to the height of 800 feet having to the north coarse porphyry and masses of trap of various descriptions placed in juxtaposition to the sandstone.

Of mineral there are none Zinc used to be obtained in small quantities near Sojat.

The country is rich in salt, which is obtained in large quantities from the natural lake of Sambhar and from various similar but smaller collections of brackish water. At Pachbhadra in the south and at some other places salt is also crystallized from the water of wells.

Marble exists in profusion at Makrana in the north, and also in smaller masses near Ghanerao on the south-east border.

The soil of Marwar varies in different parts of the country, and comprises several varieties from almost unmixed silex which can grow nothing except after a heavy fall of rain, to the finest black (called chikni, or fat) which produces wheat and other grains in large quantities with comparatively little artificial help. Wheat, barley, bajra, moth, mung and til are the chief agricultural productions of Marwar.

4 Luni, whose source is in a lake at Ajmere where it takes the name of Sagarmati is the chief characteristic of the physical aspects of Marwar. When it unites with Sarawati at a place called Govindgurh, it is baptised with the name of Luni, and after flowing in the south-westerly direction it loses itself in swamps and marshes near the Rann of Cutch. The chief tributaries, such as the Jayri, the Sakri, the Guna-bala, the Rona, the Bandi and the Juwai which chiefly take their rise from the Aravalli Hills swell its volume. In the rainy season, if the rains are abundant—a rare circumstance—it is made a little turbid and turbulent.

5 The etymological meaning of Marwar or more correctly Maruwar is the region of death, and it is not surprising, therefore, to find that the country as a whole is a barren and uninviting one. The scarcity of water the want of rains, consequent on the geographical position of the country the characteristic dry climate, produced by the geological nature of the district, and, the utmost scorching heat would have very expressed and practically conveyed those qualities which the name of the state too palpably bears, had not the river Luni somewhat compensated these losses. Some portions enriched by the water of Luni or other minor streams are remarkably fertile and thus the general aspect of barrenness is occasionally relieved by plots of fruitful and pleasant verdure.

CHAPTER II.

BRIEF DESCRIPTION OF THE CENSUS OF MARWAR

1 Though the census of Marwar for the first time was taken in 1881 General outline which fell on the 17th February of that year, but as it was the unique of its kind since the glorious and happy advent of the British era, the prejudices of the people could not be entirely disarmed and many difficulties were coped with by the Durbar In the present enumeration, however, many innovations were introduced. The circles were formed, the blocks defined and the houses numbered. The agency selected was trained and prepared for the work The directions were issued from time to time and the tours were constantly made The preliminary operations were satisfactorily carried through, and the census itself was a synchronous one

2 All the measures proposed and the circulars issued by the Government Modus operandi. were adopted, and, additions made to them in consultation with the Resident W R S wherever deemed necessary, in order to meet the peculiar local wants

The steps which were taken are as noted below —

- (a) — Preparation of a code
- (b) — Formation of census area
- (c) — Selection of Agency
- (d) — Preliminary record
- (e) — The abstraction of entries in the census schedules.
- (f) — The tabulation in detail of the figures thus abstracted
- (g) — Compilation of final census tables

3 A code, embodying all those necessary instructions which the Government suggested and which the peculiar state of the Preparation of a code country required, was prepared

In order to make the procedure thoroughly intelligible a brief and simple synopsis and a short catechism was made in which the Inspectors, Supervisors and Thikana Ahalmads were examined A school also was established in which the candidates were trained and made acquainted with the method of filling up the schedules.

4. The whole of Marwar together with Mallani including 26 towns and 4,199 villages was divided into 23 divisions which Formation of Census Area were sub-divided into 151 circles, of which 6,349 blocks were formed,

The circles were made in order of Hakumats, each including all the villages under a Thana. The blocks were made in order of Mohallas and the limit of each block was fixed to include not more than 150 houses or 600 men on the whole.

The size of the block, however was such as could be conveniently visited by one single person on the census night. Wherever any Dhance was situated at a great distance, it was split up into separate blocks. As a matter of fact, sufficient numbers of isolated hamlets and scattered huts were apportioned to one man to deal with. Arrangements were made so that all the inns, dharamsalas, encamping grounds, places where the troops or regiments halted, Thanas and Sayar Chowkees, the huts of labourers working on the Nagore line (under construction) as well as on the Bilara Bund, were marked. The enumerators were made responsible for the correct enumeration of all persons found residing in their respective blocks and they were enjoined to inspect all those places where the Kanjars, Sanas, Baldias etc. generally had their thatches, and where the Marwars of Bhil, Mura and Gonds were situated.

r. 6. By a house was meant any dwelling of two or more families having a separate independent entrance from the public way while a family was defined as including all the people whether one only or many who eat together at one common hearth or "chola" together with servants residing with them. If two or more separate families were found to be residing in that dwelling,

10 10 10
— they were differentiated by "manoo" or sub-divisional numbers as — — — 1 2 3

&c. Each family thus separated was considered a separate house and for the purposes of abstraction, a fresh page of the schedule was used for each of them.

7 The colour of the block number was red, while that of the serial Colour of numbers. number black, and the former was made the numerator while the latter the denominator of the fraction,

Block number

Serial number

In the parganah of Sheo and the west in parts of Mallani where wandering and homeless people generally resided, the house numbers were marked on "Rali" (a sort of cover filled with rags) which in Merts wherever there were not fixed dwellings, these numbers were put on pieces of wood or on stone mills, which the people preserved till the final census day.

8 The Durbar was kind enough to empower the census officials to Selection of Agency employ the services of each and every individual to help in the enumeration. The Hakims also were enjoined to devote sufficient attention towards it and assist in the matter.

The persons generally selected to act as Supervisors and Inspectors were taken out of the Hakim ut Ahaldads, Baori Muhammids, School Masters and Thanadar, with the exception of Mallani where passed and paid candidates were deputed. If a circle included any Thikana together with some of its adjoining villages, a new circle of it was formed, the Thikana Ahamed & Kamdar being appointed as a Supervisor while in the case of Hawala villages, the charge was intrusted to the Hawala Thanadar or Darogah.

Some enumerators objected to mark the houses of scavenger classes for which purpose the labourers were hired.

Thus the whole census staff organised consisted of —

Superintendent	..	1
Deputy Superintendent.	..	1
Sadar Office Establishment	..	14
Inspectors (including one kept in the Sadar Office)	..	24
Supervisor:	... { Hawa employees Hakimut Officials Jajir Ahaldads } ..	11 108 140 559
Enumerators	..	6,343

10 On the 11th of February 1890 the Muzahib Ali issued an order to Progress report. prepare a brief outline of the procedure to be followed in the coming census. The work was commenced accordingly in right earnest on the 18th of April, when a training school was started. The Inspectors were appointed on the 1st and the supervisors selected on the 15th of July. The sub-divisional list was finally prepared on the 20th September last. The directions for the preparation of circle and block lists were issued on the 4th of August. The work connected with the block and circle lists reached its highest pinnacle in the month of September and was completed by the 25th of October. As soon as the blocks were formed, the enumerators were appointed. The work of house-numbering was commenced in the end of October.

CHAPTER III.

ENUMERATION OF THE PEOPLE

11. The form of the schedule prescribed for Rajputana is given in the Tex ~~entitled~~ Marwar Census Code Part I—(Vide Appendix D)

One page was devoted to each family in order to facilitate checking, and sufficient space was thereby left for making any addition or correction on the night of the final count.

It contained 13 columns.

Column 1st was set apart for serial number, it was not filled on the first visit, but on the second round when the entries were checked.

In column 2nd was inserted the name of the person. If any child had not been named the word "infant" was put down and if any objection was raised in telling the name of a female, the relation of that female with the head of the family was noted down. Strict orders were issued not to insist on telling the name of the female if it was not voluntarily stated.

In column 3rd was entered the name of the father of the person.

Column 4th was meant for the entry of the sex.

The Hindus were entered in the column specified for males while their spiritual leaders were denoted in column 10th.

In column 5th was put down the age of the person and in the case of infants the word "infant" was only recorded. If the age was not stated exactly, it was guessed from the appearance of the person or enquired about from other relatives.

In column 6th, "Dharam" and in 7th Punth or "Firka" was inserted.

Columns 8th and 9th were reserved for the entries of race and "Kshatriya". The reason of these distinctions carried to a hair was that Marwar is chiefly inhabited by Hindus who are divided into different religions, clans, castes and sects, and it may be reasonably believed that the interesting though the short account which will be given hereafter, of the various castes that flourish in Marwar, of the various sects that possess political and social importance, and, of the various subdivisions of the clans into which the world renowned reigning family is divided, would satisfy a student of Ethnology.

Column 10th was specified for infirmities.

Column 11th was set apart for birth places.

Column 12th was meant for occupation. In the case of children and women who did not work for wages, the occupation of the persons who supported them was inserted.

The attention of the enumerators was particularly drawn to avoid the word "ditto" in their entries.

12. The sheets were printed both sides, across half sheets of half blanched paper. The number of pages in each book Enumerators books varied from 10 to 150. The binding was simple enough as two separate limp thick papers were stitched on both the sides.

Each book contained —

- (1).—Title page.
- (2).—Directions to enumerators with questions for first and 2nd rounds.
- (3).—Block list.
- (4).—Schedules.
- ().—Abstract.

The total number of books used in Marwar and Mewar was 6,349 one book having been given to each block.

13. After the staff was organized and trained to the work, the preliminary operations were commenced which lasted for 5 months. During this period, the enumerators visited every house of their respective block and recorded in the first round the particulars of those persons only who were likely to stay there till the night of the 26th February leaving one page blank for unoccupied houses, shops, cattle folds and huts &c. for entries if required on the final census night.

14. The supervisor supervised the work of the enumerators while the work of both of these was inspected by the Inspectors, Extent of checking and subsequently checked by the Hakims. Besides the Superintendent and the Deputy Superintendent made tours nearly throughout the whole of Marwar examining the work and issuing instructions whenever thought expedient.

The difficulties met with in the beginning were to enter the dharum or punth also clan and race but they were successfully overcome as explanatory and differentiating directions were issued. Also the enumerators books were sent for in order of circles in the Sadar where the mistakes were corrected all these measures facilitated to a great extent the comprehension of those minute differences. In some places, however where the enumerators were found in a backward condition, the supervisor acted their part.

15. It is worth while to mention here that the date of the final census which was fixed by the Government to be the 26th of February 1891 in addition to its being a full moon-lit night of a fair weather free from the severity of shivering cold or the scorching heat of the burning summer had proved to be equally of double advantage in Marwar.

(1)—It was a time when there was no probability of the large masses of people assembling together at any particular place in public fairs, which for the most part, are held in Marwar in the months of March and September.

(2)—No marriages among the Hindus took place on or about that date, as the planet "Bhūaspat," jupiter, under whose influence it is thought auspicious to contract marriages, had sunk down. Thus the whole work went on fairly and smoothly, and a good deal of difficulty concerning the cancellation of previous entries and making new insertions was thereby saved which would have been too much, had the case been otherwise.

16 On the morning of the 26th February, the final census day, a Final census Durbar proclamation was issued enjoining the head of every family to stay at his home and keep light, till the final census was over.

At the fall of the evening, when the moon made its appearance, the enumerator being furnished with red ink was out to make his last round. He visited all the houses whether occupied or not, all the inns, temples, and other such places of resort where there was the least likelihood of any person being found residing. "The use of red ink on the census night was valuable as it enabled the checking establishment to distinguish the entries of the preliminary record, from those of the final census, and prevented enumerators' playing tricks with the entries." The supervisors and inspectors in the meantime moved to and fro to inspect the work as it progressed. The census work did not last till after 4 a m. The Deputy Superintendent at Sivari and the Superintendent with his subordinates at the capital of the state, made rounds throughout the whole of night.

17 Generally speaking the people of Marwar were favourably disposed towards the census. His Highness the Maharaja Sahib, Attitude of the people and his brother, Maharaja Dhiraj Col Sir Pratap Singh K. C. S. I., & A. D. C. to His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales, the Minister of the State, were foremost in getting themselves and the Zenana Sirdars enumerated. All the other Mahajans Rao Rajas and many other jagirdars followed the example set by His Highness. If any jagirdar, or Murzidan made any objection, the instance of His Highness was quoted.

All persons had understood the objects and aims of the census as "minakh and ghus gunti," but if there was any misapprehension, it had got grounds only in the Bhils and Grassis who were under the false impression that they were to be sent to the Kabul war, which was strengthened by a fortuitous event. Some survey chains of the Settlement Department, were lying on the Railway Station which they mistook for fetters to be bound with, but they were finally satisfied that it was merely a wrong supposition, not based on facts.

Some people regarded the marking of their houses with black numbers a bad omen, on account of the "Daserah" and "Dewali" festivals then drawing near. Some Mahajans in some of the parganas interpreted the census in the light of levying poll-tax, but their whimsical notions, like others of its kind, soon melted away.

18. Among the ignorant classes of people whom the census operations seemed entirely new and whose rude and rough imagination could not picture the advantage which the Durbar aimed at, from the enumeration, good many poems in vernacular on the dark as well as the bright side of census were current, some of them representing the fun, the census people used to make, when they were initiated into the method of block numbering, and house counting others showing the useless trouble which they gave to the people in putting them the so called valuable questions, says one. What has the Durbar to do to ask the age of the people. Another Why should the census officials enquire about the occupation. Oh! either these particulars are worse than nothing or import some worse consequences for us. Other poems, however insinuated the mode of numbering, the purport of questions and the method of putting down entries which were of some value as far as the understanding of the directions was concerned. As an example of the latter the readers are requested to see the three last pages of the Census Code Part I.

CHAPTER IV.

19 One of the most important characteristic features of the present census was the abolition of the enumeration tax levied on the previous occasion, at the rate of one rupee per twenty houses to pay the Hindi writers, in addition to their daily food (Petias) especially engaged as enumerators, and to which the Brahmins who positively refused to pay the tax, and to whose remonstrances the Durbar yielded, were the only exceptions (Vide page 19 of the review on the census operations of 1881 in Native States of Rajputana)

20 Some difficulty was anticipated in securing an exact enumeration of Bhils and Grassis in Marwar, as a rumour was afloat that they had received a message from their Chief Sirdar, the Rao of Jora Mirpura in Meywar—where a fear of alarming them was expressed—to the effect that it would be a sheer breach of their caste rules if they would allow themselves to be counted. The Grassis of Bijapur and Bera consequently made strong expostulations, so much so, that it was thought inexpedient to do anything beyond courting the huts of the hill people who were connected with those of Meywar. Successful arrangements were, however, made afterwards to bring about their reconciliation, and they were dealt with in an unostentatious quiet way, their patails and “bohra” being appointed their own enumerators.

21 It was thought advisable at first to intrust the census work to the Hawala Census Thanadars and Darogas of the Hawala, but when it was observed that it was not being carried on in a satisfactory manner, it was, in consultation with the Hawala Superintendent, placed in the hands of paid supervisors sent from the Saddar Office for each division, under the direct supervision of the Pargana Inspector. Thanks are due to Major W. Loch, for his kind support in promptly ordering all the arrangements as desired, and to Kalla Chater Bhooj for the assistance, he gave in carrying out all the measures proposed regarding the Hawala census 22 The census of all these places was secured through a special Supervisor appointed for the purpose. The assistance which Mr Home, the Manager Jodhpore Railway was ever ready to give for the enumeration of the coolies on Railway, workshops, and other such places, was most valuable, and the help which the Overseer, Munshi Shubh Lal afforded to the supervisor deputed to secure the census of the gangs of workmen employed on the Bilara Band has been one of the chief factors in bringing about the accuracy in results of that place.

The aid of Surgeon Major, A. Adams M. D. F. R. C. S. in the satisfactory enumeration of the patients of all the Dispensaries of the state without any trouble, deserves special consideration.

The prompt attention which Major S. Beaton bestowed to what was requested of him in securing the census of Sirdar Reala is highly commendable.

23. As the Jodhpore Railway did not run after 9 p.m., there was no necessity to take special measures for the purpose. The Railway premises including all stations, signalmen and gate-men's huts and all the quarters occupied by the Railway staff, were enumerated in the block of the villages near which they were situated.

24. House-holder's schedules were given to the members of the European community and Hindi schedules to Maharaja Rao-Rajya, and other influential personages. All of them were filled up properly.

The Europeans residing in the capital and those of the salt department were provided with one copy of the schedules, and, in some cases with a spare copy of it, for preliminary record. On the night of the final census or the morning following, the schedules were once more presented to them for addition or excision as the case might be.

Though in some of the house-holders' schedules the particulars regarding the native servants also were recorded but generally speaking such cases were few and far between. After the final census was over and the abstract wired to the Resident, the European schedules after being transliterated into Hindi were sent in original to the Census Commissioner Ajmere, through the Resident, Western Rajputana States, for abstraction.

The abstract given below will show the number of house-holders' schedules distributed, and the number of European and Eurasian population in Marwar.

25. The Deputy Superintendent was appointed to secure the enumeration of the camp followers of the Agent to the Governor-General, who was also joined by Col. Percy W Powlett, C. S. I. & Col. Marshall, at Sowar, on the census day. An order was however issued in the camp to make no objection whatever in getting themselves censured.

The camp of His Highness at Desuri was also satisfactorily enumerated, special arrangements for the same being made beforehand.

26. Arrangements were made for the enumeration of the travellers and postal runners at fixed places the Thanas, Chowkias of Customs, Hakums, and Hawala, as well as postal stages, and Jagirdars Thikanes, being utilised for the purpose. To avoid re-enumeration printed tickets were supplied to the persons thus enumerated.

27. No marriage processions among the Hindus proceeded on that night, as the lagan or auspicious days for the celebration of Hindu weddings were avoided by the Government in choosing the date of the final census, as stated in para 15 but in the case of the marriages of Mohammedans and others, the route and destination of wedding parties, likely to come to, or to leave any village, were watched and entered into separate block books, it being previously ascertained that they had not been counted in their own villages.

28. From the perusal of para 15 it would also appear that no public fair of any importance took place on or about the 26th of February.

29. The vast thals or tibias of sand which stretch in the Parganas of Shoa, Sandhore, Phakodi, and Mallani are inhabited chiefly by the wandering Sindhs. They settle on a spot where grass is usually found, and leave it when the grazing is exhausted, for other inviting fields. They are therefore rarely found in some fixed dwellings, for which main reason, as already stated, the block numbers &c., were marked on the rahi or on stone mills, which they usually kept very safe. On the night of the final census the exact position of their encamping grounds was ascertained by the leading men of the neighbouring villages, where the enumerators hastened, visiting such other rendezvous falling in their way.

Special arrangements were made for the enumeration of Banjaras who abound in the Parganas of Jalore and Pachbbadra, and who move from one place to another with their oxen, laden with trade commodities.

CHAPTER V.

ABSTRACTING THE FIGURES

30 As soon as the final census was over, the enumerators' abstract Pargana abstract was prepared, for which each enumerator was directed to prepare the required figures in the supervisors' presence. It consisted essentially of two parts. In the first was shown a correct total of the occupied and unoccupied houses separately. The results, thus arrived at, gave such statistics, which were not again abstracted. In the second, the exact number of males and females with their totals was given, which was the chief check upon abstraction carried on afterwards.

After the abstracts were made and finally certified by the supervisors, they got up a circle abstract and noted down the number of the house-holders, schedules for Europeans on the top of the first page of the enumeration books, and then signed each, in attestation of its accuracy. From such abstracts, the inspector made an abstract of the whole of the Pargana.

31 Immediately the abstracts of all the parganas were received, a summary Despatch of Telegram to the Resident W. R. S. for the whole of the state, was got ready and the result wired to the Resident on the 6th of March, the population of Mugra Merwara and of half Sambhar being excluded. The latter being a Durraja its census was entrusted to the Jeypore Durbar, and the figures did not reach in time to be incorporated in the Marwar totals.

The reason of the preparation of the preliminary abstract, so expeditiously, was that a red Hindi robkar was previously issued, in which certain time was fixed, covering the space of the first week of March only, in proportion to the distance and the time, the sauar or mail cou'd probably take, within which the inspectors were ordered to submit their respective abstracts. With a view to give this order a practical embodiment, a tempting stimulus was offered. To those census inspectors whose abstracts would reach the saddar office on the prescribed date, a reward of 15 days extra pay was promised. In the same way to those, whose abstracts would be handed over on the second day, a reward of one week's pay was to be granted and so on, till the reward was to be a reward no more, but a deduction of pay of one, two, three and four weeks, if the abstracts were to be forwarded after the lapse of the first, second, third and fourth day, respectively, from the prescribed date. Besides this, it was also stated in the "robkar" that the prize-holders would win approbation and receive a certificate as well, while others, whose abstracts would reach after the date fixed for it, would be deprived of all such favours and bcons.

Machinery for abstracting the figures

32 In order to facilitate the accomplishment of the work, an efficient staff was kept at the saddar office which consisted of

Room Inspectors	—	14
Assistant Room Inspectors	—	14
Abstractors	—	403
Total	—	437

The persons generally selected to act as Room Inspectors were partly those who had worked as supervisors and inspectors, and partly those who had been candidates for service.

The average number of entries recorded per abstractor per diem came to about 670·8 of souls. The number of the staff was enhanced and decreased according to the rapid and slow progress of the work respectively.

Preliminary examination of books 33. When the enumeration books reached the sub-district office they were closely looked into and examined.

- (1).—That the number of books equalled the number of blocks.
- (2).—That the entries of caste, its sub-divisions, sect or sept were clearly noted.
- (3).—That the number of pages corresponded to the number of houses given in the block list.
- (4).—That the series of house numbers was not broken anywhere.
- (5).—That the number of the house holders schedules noted corresponded with their actual number stitched in the books.
- (6).—That no other irregularity or departure from the directions issued, had been made.

When any deficiency was observed in any schedule the inspector or supervisor was referred to. The chief advantage of the preliminary examination, before the abstraction was commenced, was that it made the assurance doubly sure. The scrutinising examination which was thus carried on, minimised the probability if there was any of oversight. On the whole nothing was found wanting.

Process of abstraction 34. There were 5 sheets prescribed for Rajputana which showed the following details, in addition to sex which was distinguished in each.—

- (1).—Religion and age.
- (2).—Religion and caste.
- (3).—Birth-place.
- (4).—Occupation.
- (5).—Infirmities with regard to age and caste respectively.

In the case of abstraction sheets 1 & 2, it was found advisable to work in pairs, one dictating, and the other abstracting the remaining sheets being worked by each man singly thus 3 men constituted a complete abstracting establishment The working sheets consisting of spaces ruled on one side, were filled up by ticks "each fifth stroke was drawn diagonally across the preceding four" The abstraction sheets were provided at the rate of three sets to two enumeration books which left a room for waste and re-abstraction If one abstracting sheet was insufficient, another sheet of the same number was to be attached to it, and the pages of both the sheets, were marked with numbers 1 and 2 respectively

The abstracts were made in order of villages and towns If there was more than one book of some village, all the books were taken into consideration, when the abstracts were being made, so that one single sheet contained the population of each single village

35 When the abstraction sheets were completed by the abstractors, System of check. they were checked by the room inspectors and other assistants. The sheets were then examined by the Deputy Superintendent, and submitted to the Superintendent, who also tested a large percentage of them

The amount of check varied directly with the number of omissions, and when it was found that the abstractors could mechanically, as it were, carry on their work, the check was proportionally relaxed

The total number of sheets in which errors were found, and corrected, was 2,467 and the number of sheets which were spoiled by the abstractors for want of practice and prudence, was nearly 6,000

36 In addition to the 5 sheets given in para 34, two separate working sheets, were introduced —One for the sub-divisions Extra sheets. of the great Rathore clan, and the other for "panth or sirkar" of various religions The former showed the "Khamps" of the Camadhviya potent princes of the solar race The latter pointed out the Shia and Sunni divisions of the Mohamedans, the Shavite (followers of shiv), the Vashnute (worshippers of Vashno) and the Shaktak (those who hold faith in a female principle) "panths of the Hindus, and the Samegi, Baistola, Tera-panthi, Sritamburi, and Dagambari divisions of the Jain religion &c.

CHAPTER VI.

TABULATING THE FIGURES.

27 When nearly the whole of the enumeration books were re-abstained and checked by the Superintendent, the work connected with tabulation or in other words, transference of the entries from the schedules to the registers, was commenced. The registers were made in order of villages, while the order of parganas was not given up. Thus the three orders were consecutively observed. First and foremost being that of the blocks, next to it was the order of villages, while the last, though not the least, was that of parganas.

The registers were 25 exclusive of that for Christians, the details for which were to be furnished by the Census Commissioner Ajmer-Merwara.

Besides the distinction of sex, which was observed in all the registers with the exception of 2nd and 3rd, the following particulars were also given —

- (1).—Houses and total populations.
- (2).—Variation in population.
- (3).—Classified list of villages and towns.
- (4).—Religions.
- (5).—Age by religions, (one for each viz. 7 in number)
- (12).—Birth places.

38 The tabulating staff consisted chiefly of those who were engaged Tabulating staff. in abstraction. But those who were found to cut worse figures in that work, were debarred to take any share in tabulation. The establishment, besides the Superintendent, and the permanent staff, was composed of —

Posters	90
Totallers	.				30
Checking department		22
				—	142

The posters posted the entries on the registers and totalled them, but the totals were only recorded with pencils. The totallers after re-totalling each page of each registor as tabulated, either charged the previous entries with red ink to show that they were correctly added up, or returned the registers as inaccurate to the posters to re total them.

39 The following remarks concerning the registers of birth-place caste Registers. and occupation deserve some special notice. As for the remaining registers, full particulars will be found in Marwar Census Code, Part II.

Birth-place register —The names of the important states of Rajputana and the names of remo'e provinces such as Bombay, Bengal, Punjab, North Western Provinces and Oudh and Madras &c were specified as birth-places. Thus the object, to shew the real movements between provinces apart, from mere intermarriages, between adjacent villages, was fully achieved.

Caste register —This register contained a record of each caste and its sub-divisions abstracted, for which purpose a big register was made comprising under it, all the important castes of Hindus, Mohammedans &c and where necessary, including the clans of the castes also, but for convenience of checking, each complete record of 10 blocks was taken as a page and totalled accordingly. These totals were collected on a seprate set of sheets at the end of the register.

As the abstraction sheet from which the occupations were to be transferred on the register, did not contain any age periods under any of the headings, the age-periods were consequently dispensed away with, in the registers, as they could not be possibly given, when no such information could be derived from the abstraction sheet.

The general size of the registers, with the exception of that of the clans of Rathores and the castes, was like the enumeration books, for which half bleached papers like those of the schedules were uscd, the name of the poster and the totaller being noted on the top of every page.

40 Some names of caste and occupation in Marwar are known in different parts of the country by various local terms and Classification of entries they consequently appeared as such in many of the schedules. To avoid confusion only one common term was recognised in abstractions as under.—

Terms put in abstraction.	Terms as appeared in the schedules.
Gola	Chakar Wazir Daroga
Pinjara	Kotwal
Mehtar	Hathu
Jats	Chowdharies
Filban	Foujdar
Kuhmar	Paryapat
Dholl	Rana
Bhat	Rao
Nai	Khawas
Kayasth	Pancholi

The tabulators were enjoined to see that absolutely synonymous terms and the same titles, spelt differently though separately abstracted, should be combined in tabulation, but the least possible variation in meaning or of spelling other than the obvious errors entitled the items to receive separate recognition.

41. The totals of the registers, after being compared with one another System of check. were checked to find out if they exactly corresponded with the village abstract. If any discrepancy, however was found to exist between them the abstraction sheets were consulted and finally the original enumeration schedules were looked into, as a last resource.

In the case of simple registers, the check was easy enough, and with little closer attention, the blunder was successfully run to the ground, for instance if the number of Jains in the block of one register was 33 and the number of Hindus 542 while in the other registers of the same block, the former was put down 33 and the latter 541 the difference was immediately disposed of either by recounting the number of Jains, or by an assumption amounting to certainty that the entries of one register must be wrong in the face of so many evidences of the other registers. The former method however was better and was more sincerely adhered to, than the latter as it, guaranteed the accuracy while the latter was more or less a suppositional hypothetical method and seldom resorted to. The test of the figures of one register with those of the others was only made the most of when the discrepancy of a clumsy and a superficial nature was detected.

With regard to the check of the village totals, it will be sufficient to lay down, that the horizontal and vertical totals, carrying and bringing forward of the pego totals were the chief safeguards against omissions,

As a matter of fact all the registers, with very few exceptions were associated and connected with one another in such a way that one of them could be checked by comparison with some other of the rest. The infirmity tables formed two series, of which the totals respectively corresponded. The birth-place register however was one which constituted a section by itself, and could not be inter-checked, save in sex totals.

42. In census a town was fixed to include a population of as many Definition of town. as 5,000 or more souls, dwelling together within a practically conterminous collection of houses and suburbs, while those falling below it, were regarded as villages.

43 The method of filling up the tables for total population, variation

Mode of filling up in population, classified list of villages and towns, relithe village and Par- gions, age by religion, infirmities by age, was too easy gana tables. to call for any special remarks, but the remaining registers viz. for caste, birth-place, occupation, and infirmities and caste were somewh. t complex, admitting numerous columns. If the number of the caste, and its sub-divisions, of the occupation and birth-places would have not been fixed, the difficulty would have been hard to manipulate. The number of castes and their sub divisions for instance, at any rate, would have spread over thousands, if such castes, which are neither important nor are found in great numbers, were to be recognized, but as is usually done in census, those only were tribulated which either possessed importance of some kind or elier or deserved special consideration from an ethnological or political point of view. But it may be added that in the 2nd part of this report where the accounts of different castes are chiefly dealt with, some of the important sub-divisions of each and every clan are given

44 When the registers, in which the order of villages and towns formed the principal feature, were duly filled in, their totals Compilation sheets, were summed up and transferred to the compilation sheets, the totaling of these entries was what may be called the final operation of compilation.

The compilation sheets may be distinguished from the registers in as much as in the former the order of parganas only was the prominent feature while in the latter that, of the blocks, circles, villages, and parganas, was observed. The former, in addition to this, contained IV & V sheets devoted to the details of towns, (in the latter the town was the main and in the former the only item, and it was therefore put in the most prominent place in the former) and sheets Nos XV and XVI specified for native Christians, which were not previously recognized in tabulation, though the information regarding these points could be conveniently derived from the tabulated entries. There was some significant difference also in register I and the compilation sheet of the same number, which related chiefly to particulars regarding rural and urban population. The other compilation sheets however differed from the registers, in the arrangements of the columns only.
The territorial unit of compilation used in the census report of the state was that of the parganas any other minor sub-division being considered too small for recognition in the tables prepared for submission to the Resident.

The third column of the compilation sheet No I, reserved for the area of each sub-division could not be possibly filled up, as the survey of the whole territory has not yet been finished and consequently the area of the state was given in round numbers, as 37,000 square miles.

Though the required comparison could not be carried on to the length of villages in the register meant to show the variation in population for want of such minute information in the record of the last census, yet the total population of the parganas which was available was given in the sheet specified for the purpose

45 The work connected with abstraction was commenced on the 16th of March. In the Month of April, the abstraction was in full swing, and by the end of that month, nearly 20 lacs of people were abstracted, of which nearly half had passed the test of re-abstraction, while the second week of May saw a change of the work from abstraction to tabulation. The average number of books passed through abstraction came up to about 800, which gives, on the whole, nearly 12 books per abstractor per diem.

The work of tabulating the figures was commenced in the second week of May. In the forth week, it was in a splendid swing, while in the beginning of June, compilation, the last stage of the work, was begun and ended.

The reason of the "fins" of the work before its time was that the Raj court's being closed for two months from the 1st of May on account of summer vacations, all the subordinates of the Superintendent, such as the Ahalmads of the Court of Sirdars, as well as as both the Munsifies, and the Stamp office, and also the clerks of the Secretariat, were engaged in checking the registers, tables &c.—who pushed on the work with greater vigour and skill.
